(demonym: lunarian | moon | 'mo:n)

The Moon is the fourth mass from the Sun. Technically, the Moon is not a planet but a natural satellite that orbits the Earth, the fifth largest in our solar system. The word for the Moon formed from the old English term, mona, meaning a measure of time. It is also called Luna and is associated with many deities, including the Greek Goddesses Artemis, Selene and the Roman Goddesses Diana and Luna. Within astrology, it is associated with the star sign Cancer and is often considered the planet of emotions. The Moon is often seen as feminine or female identities and is personified as feelings, emotions, imagination and our inner selves. Though there is no direct LGBTQIA+ connection, it is associated with feminine gender identities. Ultimately the Moon represents our inner self, thoughts and feelings
